

Photovoice Masterclass (Online)

Our Training

Photovoice Masterclass

The Masterclass is recommended for those who have already attended the basic photovoice training. If you wish to deepen your understanding of photovoice, to touch up the basics of photography, to learn to read photographs and implement your own photovoice project; then this workshop is for you.

This online training provides you with the skills and theoretical knowledge you need to start implementing your own photovoice project. The principle of this workshop is learning by doing. Participants will learn and experience how to design, implement and facilitate a photovoice project by facilitating (parts of) the photovoice process.

Photovoice is a participatory research method that allows participants to express themselves and reflect on the issues of concern to them through the use of photography and storytelling. Photovoice can be used for a wide range of purposes including: Monitoring and Evaluation (M&E), advocacy, research and community-based projects.

Method

A combination of theory and practice. The training will focus on helping participants understand: photography and theory; photography and practice; photovoice and picture analysis; probing and facilitation in relation to picture-stories and how to design their own photovoice workshop. Upon completion, participants will have the knowledge, skills and tools to implement their own Photovoice project.

Participants

Our training will be valuable for M&E practitioners, program coordinators/managers from implementing organizations, researchers, development workers, facilitators and photographers, and anyone looking for creative ways to gain insight and understanding into people's lived experiences and concerns.
