

Photovoice Training (Online)

Our Training

Photovoice is a participatory research method that has been recognised across the international development sector. Using photography, this storytelling method allows for opening up a dialogue between beneficiaries and/or stakeholders, creating a (safe) space for them to express themselves and reflect on issues related to project implementation. By handing over the camera to research participants and asking them to document their experiences, you get unique inside knowledge into the issues that concern the people involved.

Photovoice can be used for a wide range of purposes, from Monitoring and Evaluation (M&E) to advocacy, to research and community-based activities.

Our training can be valuable for anyone looking for new and creative ways to gain insight and understanding into people's lived experiences and concerns, such as: NGO staff, researchers, educators, community- health- or social workers, photographers, visual artists and marketeers.

Method

Our training offers both theoretical knowledge and practical experience in the use of Photovoice. The training will focus on helping participants to understand what Photovoice is, how Photovoice works, and understand its effectiveness.
